FAREWELL, A LONG FAREWELL

By BOB McANDREWS

It's farewell, a short farewell, to King Football after this afternoon's performance.

But it's farewell, a long farewell to sixteen Galloping Gaels and all their gridiron greatness.

Playing their last game for Saint Mary's today are Wagner Jorgensen, Herbert Schreiber, Edward Erdelatz, Herman Meister, Malcolm Fiese, Hugh Sill, Everett Pendleton, Hugh O'Connor, Edward Hallman, Clarence Kellogg, Joseph Cassidy, William McKinney, James Preston, Leslie Jirsa, Roland Willett and Joel Brown.

These sixteen comprise the largest number of men to play for four straight years at Saint Mary's, the largest number of football varsity men to graduate simultaneously, the most severe loss ever suffered by Coach Madigan at one fell swoop.

The very fact that their number was so large made it impossible for all the seniors to star as, perhaps, their years of service deserved. Perhaps some whose names are comparatively obscure might have been the darlings of the headlines had Fate provided the "breaks", had the exigencies of schedule or health or physical makeup been just a mite different.

All the sixteen, however, are fine football players, gallant men and lovers both of the game and of Saint Mary's.

Wagner Jorgensen came to America as a youngster from Denmark, attended Burlingame High School and entered Saint Mary's in the footsteps of Brother Carl. Like Brother Carl, Wag was originally a tackle. Converted in his sophomore year to a center post, he soon proved the wisdom of the change and this year mounted to the topnotch rank of the Coast's pivot men. Most spectacular to watch is Wag's defensive playing, but just as important is his amazing record of never having made a bad pass in his three varsity seasons. Upon graduation Wagner will accept an executive position with an oil company with which he has worked during summer vacations.

Herbert Schreiber, a product of San Francisco's Mission, came to the Gaels after a brilliant career with Mission High School. Cool, steady and scientific in his football, this "grand old man" of the Moraga gridiron climbed straight to stardom and this year was undoubtedly the Gaels' outstanding man-of-all-work in the backfield. Passer, signal-caller and especially artistic ball-carrier, Herb doth all things well in a suit of moleskins. The Herb of today is a long journey from the Herb who was decreed "too sickly for athletics" in his younger days.

Edward Erdelatz followed the Christian Brothers' influence all his life—in grammar school, in high school, in college. To the football public Eddie typifies a pass-snagging, tackle-riding, punt-covering end par excellence; to fellow students he represents as well a smiling good fellow, a talented mimic, an able cartoonist and an excellent songster; to those "in the know" he symbolizes something finer—symbolizes courage and will-power which brought him from supposedly permanent injury to painful but complete return to form in the game he idolizes.

Herman Meister, another product of proud San Francisco and its Polytechnic High School, finishes today three years of steady service at tackle, three years of constant first-rank rating. Like his roommate Schreiber, Herm was the steadying influence, the rallying point in this year's Gael squad. Like Erdelatz, he was the crooning entertainer of the gang. An inspirational leader and a fine goal-kicker, Herm did more than just his job.

Malcolm Fiese, pride and joy of Salinas, triumphed last Sunday over a series of injuries and jinxes which had kept him for three years from attaining the peak of perfection which was always his potentially. Only one or two men in the West can match Malc in punting; few surpass him as a safety man and as an all-round backfield performer. Shifted from quarterback to fullback this season, Malc made good in a big way, leading up to a brilliant climax in his performance against Washington State. The Associated Students of whom he is treasurer will miss him.

Coach Bill Spaulding had a long chance on the field of injuries yesterday by mapping out the 30 available men into his defensive line. The game was in the way of dummy prospect. A game will be held Thursday night on Friday.

U. C. L. A. SPORTS

By BEN PERSON

Having already attained more than the critics believed possible at the beginning of the season, U. C. L. A.'s sparse football squad of some 23 to 30 football players, depending on whether you count all names on the roster or only those of the youngsters who have turned in more than 20 minutes of playing time, end the 1935 season today.

Five Westwood regulars—there can be few "reserves" in a squad of 23—end their college football careers with their first appearance in Kezar. Heading the list is Charles Cheshire, the most versatile football player to graduate from Bruin ranks. If the line functions up to the par of early season, Chuck will be sprung through the line, from whence he will give a polished exhibition of open-field running.

If the line fails him he will be called upon to resort to passes. "Chuck" can throw 'em, accurately and on the dead run. Perhaps the play calls for a kick to the coffin corner. Cheshire's the man the signal-caller—and he may be Cheshire—chooses for that sort of work. He isn't a whirlwind as a blocker, but 170-pounders seldom are, unless they are Remy Olmsted—of which you will hear more later.

It is sufficient to say that in Cheshire the Bruins have a superlative player. He has heart and he has natural ability. He also has a dog, if you must know, and he's a swell sort of critter. A bird-dog—partially.

As for Remy Olmsted, the Gaels themselves may give the best testimony. He was the youngster who in 1934 stood the Madigan Machine on its head after the Bruins had gained a 6 to 0 lead, which was the final score. Remy—a 165-pounder—backed up the line and when he wasn't doing that he was stopping the best Moraga thrusts through the air. He was all over the field, as he has been all over the Bruin backfield in his three years with the varsity. He has been intermittently a fullback, a right halfback and a quarterback. He has been what they call in baseball a utility man. When the list of fullbacks goes haywire it is Remy who steps into the berth. When the Bruins are short of right halves Remy's a right half. When the quarterback situation is critical you can find Olmsted plugging the hole.

He's also an actor—and a crooner.

The third member of the quintet is Steady Sam Stawisky. To look at him you'd say his best football would be played on a Sunday morning over a cup of coffee and a newspaper. He protrudes a bit in front and a bit in back. You'd say he was slow. In fact he doesn't look like a football player, but a review of the season shows that little yardage has been made over his position and that Cheshire can attribute ALL of his long runs to Stawisky's down-field blocking.

Down-field blockers are usually pretty fast men. Which proves that there is something wrong with the estimate of Steady Sam's speed. He doesn't cross the line to block. He is in the interference. For what he has done to them many squads have selected him on their all-opponent teams.

Sam may look like an armchair athlete, but he has real ability.

Then there's Irish Bill Murphy. He has the Ould Sod wit, a quick mind, a nose for what's right in a given situation. He can BLOCK, which is what matters most to Mr. Spaulding. He can round out a quartet—or a trio, which is tougher. Murph is the fellow of whom Spaulding said, "He makes mistakes, but you can't get away from the fact that when he's in there the team makes touchdowns."

The last of the quintet is Clarence Baldwin. Clarence immediately suggests a svelte youth, with blond hair and horn-rimmed glasses. 'Tain't so. He's a 190-pounder, whom William Henry Spaulding and Co. account the toughest member of the squad. Baldwin counts the Colorado Desert as his home and he's just as tough as the toughest denizen of those parts.

The names of Stawisky, Murphy and Cheshire will probably be in the starting lineup today, with Olmsted and Baldwin scheduled to see considerable service. The rest of the roster in at the kickoff will be a mixture of sophomores and juniors.

In the first-year group are George Robinson at left end and Walt Schell at fullback. Robinson is the youngster who showed up unannounced and unknown on the first day of practice in September. He proved to be the answer to the distressing problem—as of three months ago—about ends. He hails from Red Oak, Iowa. Schell is a 215-pounder who can block, dick, pass, kick-off, run with the ball, back up the line and defend against passes. He's the same sort of versatile youngster as big Fred Funk, right half.

Funk is probably the best all-around player on the coast. He's a kicker of rare ability, for one thing. His punts helped decide the Stanford game, which in turn helped to elevate the Bruins to first place in Pacific Coast Conference standings with California and the Cardinals. Funk has another year ahead of him. For a 215-pounder he handles himself remarkably well. Notice how he bounces around and how he catches ball-carriers from behind.

The line—except for Robinson and Stawisky—is composed entirely of juniors. At center is Sherman Chavoor, named by 18 out of 19 Southern Methodist players for their all-opponent team. Behind him is rugged, reliable Larry McConnell and behind McConnell is Lee Frankovich, brother of Mike, the ex-quarterback.

The guards are John Hastings, a 125-pound product of Los Angeles High School, and Earl Sargent, a 205-pounder from Bakersfield Junior College. Sargent's work this season has gained him some first string all-coast berths, honorable mention on many all-American selections and a first team berth on the nationwide eleven named last week by Fritz Crisler. Understudies in addition to Baldwin are Bob Barr, a short, square-rigged junior, and Norman Taber, 200-pound sophomore converted from fullback.

The tackles are an iron-man crew. Stawisky has averaged better than 45 minutes a game, including the so-called "set-ups." George Dickerson and Carl Olson, juniors, have shared the right tackle berth between them, while Glen Riley and Lawrence Murdoch played relief roles of a few minutes each.

If you're looking for iron-men you won't have to travel far from the tackles to find them. Right next door George Robinson, Bob Schroeder and Bob McChesney (before he became ineligible) have been in the habit of averaging about 45 minutes a game. Now that McChesney is out Ray Peers and Charley Pike are coming in for shares of playing time, and mighty fine jobs they do for their sizes.

Schroeder and Robinson are the big surprises of the season—the former because he developed into a strong, dependable end after doing fair work as a sophomore and the latter because nobody had ever seen him before he showed up for the first day of practice. Both can give good demonstrations of the inadvisability of trying to skirt the Bruin flanks.

Earle Harris, 215-pounder who got a late start, came into his own as an end about the time that McChesney went by the boards, which means that the Bruins finish the season with about the same end strength with which they started.

That about cleans up the Bruin roster, except for two valuable substitutes and a few youngsters who have seen little service. The subs are Don Ferguson, bandy-legged understudy for Cheshire and Billy Bob Williams, 200-pound sophomore who has settled at quarterback after after being used successively at fullback and right half.

As a sample of what kind of row the Westwood regulars have had to hoe this season it is interesting to note the number of games in which players have turned in 58 minutes or more:

Funk, 5; Cheshire, 5; Stawisky, 2; Chavoor, 2; Murphy, Sargent and Williams, 1 each.

FAREWELL, A LONG FAREWELL

Hugh Sill joined the group of "submerged individualities" who always had football ability in them but who were kept from displaying it by hard-luck injuries. After two years of terrible breaks, Hugh flashed out this season as a tricky open field runner who broke up ball games and broke the hearts of helpless defenders. A Bakersfield lad and an honor student, Hugh is one of three brothers who are all Saint Mary's men. His brother Frank, quarterback on the Gael freshmen, will carry on the name.

Everett Pendleton has always been a dependable end, but this year won his spurs as a star in his own right, with the Washington State game as his peak. A native of Salt Lake City but a graduate of San Francisco's Polytechnic High, Ev followed the remarkable family tradition at Saint Mary's by falling heir to the reputation of brother Wayne, another fine end in his day.

To these gentlemen and to Edward Hallman of San Leandro, the fastest and one of the smartest men in coast football; to Hugh O'Connor of San Francisco, guard; to Clarence Kellogg and Joseph Cassidy, roommates, fellow Chicagoans and smashing fullbacks; to William McKinney of Visalia, end; to James Preston of Tulare, tackle; to Leslie Jirsa of Merced, center; to Roland Willetts of Los Angeles, half; and to Joel Brown of Exeter, quarter, our appreciation for many hours of entertainment, our best wishes for a bright future.

RECORDS

Saint Mary's and U. C. L. A., protagonist in the season's swan song this afternoon, may not be undefeated (let him who is without sin cast the first stone); but they do hold at least a few records.

The Gaels rank as the fourth best defensive team in the nation, with only 24 points scored against them. Meanwhile they have annexed 108 digits for themselves. With only one defeat on their escutcheon, the Marauders still rank high on the country's choicer lists.

The Bruins not only share the Coast Conference title with California and Stanford, but lead the entire membership in scoring with 75 points rung up in purely Conference games.

TOUGH LUCK

U. C. L. A. does plenty of sharing this year. Besides divvying up the conference crown with the Bears and the Indians, the Bruins split the "hard luck championship of the coast" with Santa Clara and Oregon. Harassed Coach Bill Spaulding lost his own son, promising halfback Bill Jr., from the squad with

CENTER DUEL

Two seniors who rate with many observers as the best centers in the west will be paired on opposite sides today. They are Sherman Chavoor of the south and Wag Jorgensen of the north. Incidentally Chavoor isn't as tired as he appears in competition—he crawls on the green instead of walking to conserve energy.

Other boys in action who have been prominently mentioned for all-coast honors are tackle Stan Stawisky, guard Earl Sargent and halfback Chuck Cheshire of the Bruins; end Eddie Erdelatz, tackle Herm Meister, guard Marty Kordick and half Herb Schreiber of the Gaels.

BRUIN-GAEL HISTORY

Results of the Bruin-Gael scraps in the past, played until this season in Los Angeles, are:

1925: Gaels 28, Bruins 0
 1929: Gaels 24, Bruins 0
 1930: Gaels 21, Bruins 6
 1931: Gaels 0, Bruins 12
 1932: Gaels 14, Bruins 7
 1933: Gaels 22, Bruins 14
 1934: Gaels 0, Bruins 6

That gives Saint Mary's a 5 to 2 edge, with the Moragans scoring 109 points against the Uclans 45. Incidentally you will note who won the last match.

UCLAN MISCELLANY

Ten of the southern squad of 30 are rugby players—look for plenty of laterals this afternoon . . . The Bruins squad of 30 is the smallest of any major team . . . Clarence Baldwin, senior guard, is a married man, only benedict of both squads . . . "Bully Bob" Williams, quarterback, wears a special headgear with his glasses incorporated in it . . . John Hastings, guard, has been called by southern sports scribes "a safe with legs" . . . Cheshire, Murphy, Stawisky, Olmsted and Baldwin are making final appearances for the Bruins . . . Bill Ackerman fills the strange combination of graduate manager and tennis coach at the southern institution . . . Earl Sargent, guard from Bakersfield, is the only Bruin regular not registered from Los Angeles or its immediate vicinity.

S P A R K S

RE LATERAL PASS

Contributing his share to the large crop of wordage on the lateral pass, Coach Bill Spaulding of the Uclans opines:

"There are dangers in the lateral pass, but it has some definite advantages. In Rugby the offense expects to lose the ball from time to time through interceptions and in football the other side is going to take the ball away from you occasionally and perhaps score on the play.

"However a team ought to get more out of Rugby tactics than it loses—if the youngsters know how to handle the ball. I don't know how well we'll be able to adapt Rugby's tricks to football, but we have 10 players who have had at least one season of the English game."

IMMOVABLE COACHES

Slip Madigan and Bill Spaulding, who face each other across the field from opposite benches, believe in staying put. Madigan has coached at but two institutions in his 16-year career—Columbia University, now Portland University, and Saint Mary's. Spaulding has worked at but three in a career of 27 years: Western State Teachers College at Kalamazoo, Michigan, 1907-1921; Minnesota, 1922-24; and U. C. L. A. ever since. It took Bill only four seasons to bring the Bruins from nowhere to a position in the Pacific Coast Conference.

FOOTBALL'S PENDULUM

After seeing plenty from his press box vantage point when Saint Mary's humbled Oregon last Sunday, Coach William Spaulding told his neighbors that he found relief in the records which showed that the Gaels are a Sunday ball club. Their best games were played against Nevada, San Francisco, Santa Clara and Oregon—all on Sabbaths. Their worst days, resulting in one defeat and two ties, were Saturdays—against California, Fordham and Washington State.

Looking at the strange situation from another angle, the Moragans reach the nadir and the zenith with rhythmic regularity—now up, now down. They started with Up for Nevada, Down next week for California; Up for U. S. F., Down for Fordham; Up for Santa Clara, Down for Washington State; Up for Oregon, now what?

NEVADA HONORS GAELS

Players from Saint Mary's, oldest Nevada rival, head the list with seven places on the Wolfpack's all-opponents team.

On the first team picked by the Reno lads, who played the Gaels here September 30, are Les Groux at half, Eddie Erdelatz at end, Herm Meister at tackle and Wag Jorgensen at center.

The alternate team includes Herb Schreiber at half, Hugh O'Connor at guard, Bill Wilkin at tackle.

FORMER MORAGANS SHINE

Former Saint Mary's stars now in professional football get their names in Monday morning's papers with surprising regularity . . . Bill Beasley completed 22 out of 32 passes playing for the Antioch Legion against the Sacramento Athletic Club last Sunday . . . George Canrinus caught a scoring pass for the Hollywood team which beat Los Angeles . . . Al Nichelini invariably scores a marker for his Chicago Cardinals, as does Ike Frankian for his New York Giants.

If the Gaels hold the U. C. L. A. Bruins scoreless today, Madigan will chalk up his second best defensive record in his 15 campaigns with Saint Mary's.

The 1935 Moragans relinquished 24 points in eight games played this season. Only three major teams in the country boast of better showings.

THEY SET THE STAGE

By MARTIN HILL

The game of football is nothing more than a show, and like all other shows the stage must be set. Heaps of recognition are given the cast of players and the director, but those who make arrangements for the entertainment are meagerly heralded, if at all.

It's the director, Slip Madigan in this case, who must shoulder the responsibility of the Saint Mary's performers. He must train his participants in such a manner as best to assure the all important triumph. The outcome of a grid show means praise or censure for him.

Because of this highly instrumental spot of jeopardy, the coach is more of a public figure than his players. But the assistant directors are all too often left out of the picture. At the Gael institution Norman "Red" Strader is so good as top sergeant to Madigan that many of the Moraga grid thespians place him on a high rung of the ability ladder near the director-in-chief.

But Mr. Strader's duties are not limited to tutoring the hefty lads. He zooms around over the weekends to witness the activity of rival teams which the Gaels will encounter later in the season.

Coach Madigan and his sterling cast start digesting the food for thought picked up by Strader in his scoutings the Monday before that opponent is to be faced. In case you don't know it, Mr. Strader was the first Saint Mary's All-American.

Then too, the other assistant who used to be pestered for the autograph "William 'Butch' Simas" lends his football knowledge to the aspiring Moraga gridsters. He scouts games that Strader is unable to attend. Simas is credited with being the best blocker in Saint Mary's football history. He was also the greatest all around athlete to ever grace the Gael campus.

So much for the coaching end of it. But Mr. Madigan, always busy, has to rely on his very competent secretary, Ed McSweeney, to get all done that is expected and asked of a coach. McSweeney, when not in the office, sees to it that the team is properly taken care of on either the practice or playing field.

Here again is too much work for one man. So there must be a varsity manager. Herb Russ handles those assignments for the Gaels. He has a few understudies who will vie for the distinction of his post when another football season rolls around.

Then there's the team physician and the trainer. Dr. E. R. Guinan is the former while the young man who totes the medicine bag on the field during time-outs for not-too-serious injuries is Pete Pedemont, a medical student at the college.

That accounts for the direct associates of the team. Yet it takes far more than that to get together a football show. There must be a setting for the performance.

Joseph Hickey, Manager of Kezar Stadium, makes negotiations with authorities at Saint Mary's College months in advance to prevent conflicts and to permit ample time for such things as the printing of schedules and tickets. Art Whittemore is his assistant.

Saint Mary's is without a graduate manager this year. The appointment of James E. Butler to the office of Comptroller put a new method in vogue at Saint Mary's. Mr. Butler supervises and applies his training to the financial affairs of the college.

The apportioning of tickets was always a major part of the graduate manager's routine. The current season finds Ed Shanahan laboring under the title of ticket manager.

Shanahan distributed the tickets to agencies, mailed and filled applications for the preferred sections, checked the receipts and took care of the complimentary and press box lists. Hiring of ticket sellers, gate-men, aisle captains, etc., was also part of the ticket manager's task. The stadium workers total close to 1,000 men. Shanahan is assisted by Rodney Stetson, Edward Smiddy, Thomas Paddock and William Milliken.

A man who is heard from twice a game by a pistol shot is Professor James L. Hagerty. He has been time-keeper for 18 years at bay region games of Saint Mary's.

While the players stage the main attraction, the bands in the pit of the stadium furnish interest. Dressy uniforms, snappy music, and clever formations add color to the day's program. Joe McTigue who did a swell job in getting the band together this year deserves a round of applause. The yell leaders figure in there for a hand too.

To familiarize you with the players and to keep you informed on what's what, Major Art McChrystal makes the Voice of Kezar talk. For those not at the game there is the air story of the contest related by Don Thompson, Ernie Smith or Doug Montell. They are aided by spotters and technicians. Harold Deal of Associated Oil maintains the public address system and the radio broadcasts.

And a game certainly would be a congestion if Herb Dana didn't have his fraternity of officials represented. The policemen are there testing the solidity of the entrances and exits with their plodding.

To further entertain and facilitate matters for members of the audience an official program known as "The Kickoff" is published for each Gael engagement in San Francisco. This production calls for more work than most people imagine, or care about for that matter.

Justin Mahoney of the Paramount Plates Company tends to the engraving, while Mose Cohen submits the grid photos. Lederer, Street & Zeus in Berkeley do the printing.

There's no doubt about it. Football, like life, is a stage and we all play a part.
